Nixon: Vietnam talks in 'sensitive stage'

WASHINGTON (AP). — President Nixon said yesterday that the Vietnam peace talks are "in a sensitive stage." Holding a 40-minute news conference in his Oval Office, the President said that his search for the quickest possible settlement will in no way be affected by the fact that the presidential election will be held on November 7.

Mr. Nixon said his aim is to end the Vietnam war "just as soon as we can get a settlement that is right." He added: "Under no circumstances will the timing of a settlement ... be affected by the fact that there's going to be an election on November 7."

While describing the peace talks as "in sensitive stage," Mr. Nixon said he could not predict when or if the peace search would succeed. Mr. Nixon ruled out any halt to the bombing of North Vietnam before the election, saying former President Lyndon Johnson made a "very, very great mistake" when he did so just before the 1968 elec-

Germans begin ousting Arabs. press manhunt

BONN. — Widespread police raids across West Germany yesterday produced expulsion orders for at least 46 Arabs since two Palestinian organizations were banned on Wednesday night for fear they would stage terrorist attacks.

The 46 expulsion orders were reported by most of the country's 10 states, but there was no official word how many Arab students and workers have already left the country.

A Federal Interior Ministry

spokesman turned aside all questions as to how many Arabs have been arrested and deported since the ban went into effect Wednesday night. He said newsman would have to ask each of the 10 West German States.

The tough security crackdown, one of a series since the Munich Olympics massacre, touched off angry student protests.

Palestinian students and workers hid from police yesterday after security agents launched their nationwide manhunt at 5 p.m. on Wednesday for the estimated 1,800 members of two Palestinian organizations banned by the government in an announcement one hour after the manhunt began.

"Many of our people managed to escape the raids," a Palestinian stu-dent said over the telephone, "They are hiding out now, but sooner or later they will probably be caught." On Wednesday Interior Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher called an unscheduled news conference and announced a government prohibition of the General Union of Palestinian Students (GUPS) and the General Union of Palestinian Workers (GUPA).

J.D.C. spending 40% of budget in Israel

TEL AVIV. — The Joint Distribu-tion Committee spends 40 per cent of its annual budget in Israel, Mr. Samuel Haber, executive director of the J.D.C., told the U.J.A. National Study Conference yesterday.

The conference in which 350

U.J.A. leaders took part, spent yesterday visiting and observing various J.D.C.-assisted programmes in Tel Aviv and Netanya, and heard reports on J.D.C. programmes abroad. The J.D.C., Mr. Haber said, hopes to spend $26m. in 1973 assisting 330,000 Jews in 25 countries. Of this sum, $7.6m, has been allocated in Israel for the J.D.C. Malben programmes for the aged and handi-capped, $1m. for religious institutions and cultural programmes, and $1m. for support of O.R.T. vocational training programme

Last year the J.D.C. spent $6.5m. to help 164,000 Jews in Europe, Mr. Haber said. The prize jury said yesterday it took the decision after being unable to agree on this year's French winner between Jacques Benoist-Mechin ("Two African Summers") and Ma-xime Rodinson ("Marxism and the Moslem World"). The prize to an Arab author was given to Andre Chedid.

President of the Association is Jean de Beer, general secretary of the Pen Club.

A number of Jewish groups in France have criticized the action of Massada which claimed to have attacked the Palestinian Library. In statements issued yesterday the Union of Jewish Students "reacted violently against such acts" and the liaison committee of Zionist Socialist Students "denounced the authors of this dangerous and provocative act."

Kollek seéks to mollify residents of Mea Shearim

Jerusalem Post Reporter

Mayor Teddy Kollek offered his. hand in reconciliation yesterday to the residents of the Mea Shearim area. He had stirred up a bitter controversy over his alleged remarks last week to Deputy Mayor Mena-hem Porush about "burning" the religious quarter or "breaking the bones" of its inhabitants,

In a public appeal to the residents of the "northern neighbourhoods" of Jerusalem, Mr. Kollek said "I have expressed my sorrow over the incident that occurred between me and Rabbi Porush." He said that his remarks to Rabbi Porush at his annual Succot reception had been inreaction to reports that had just been given to him by police officers apparently at the reception itself about serious disturbances and destruction of property in the "northern neighbourhoods."

"In all that I said during that sidents, who are as dear to me as every resident of the city," he said.

The Mayor expressed his deep anxiety over disturbances in the neighbourhoods caused by "provocateurs," He noted that there had been overturning of garbage bins, fires and interference with sanitation workers and buses.

"For the good of the city and for plain about workers being too well the achievements we have made to-paid," he declared. "We would be gether, I appeal to you to do all in the achievements we have made toyour power to prevent the continuation of these serious deeds.

More bombs explode in Ulster

BELFAST (UPI). - A bomb in a living room sent Northern Ireland's death toll still higher yesterday.

Another closed a Belfast newspaper.

The militant Provisional wing of the Irish Republican Army said it had assassinated four undercover Police in Portadown, 37 kms. south-west of Belfast, were at a loss to explain the bomb which killed Patrick Connelly, 28, in his own living room. Mr. Connelly's father, mother and brother were injured in the blast.

over hotel run by Israel firm

DAR-ES-SALAAM (Reuter), The Tanzanian Government nounced yesterday it had taken over management of a leading luxury hotel here run by an Israeli firm since 1965.

The official reason given was that it believed the state-run tourist corporation was now able to manage the 400-bed Kilimanjaro Hotel itself. The Government said in a statement it would welcome any claim for fair and reasonable compensation from the Israeli management consultants, Mionot Limited, and promised full cooperation.

The i2m, hotel, overlooking the palm-fringed harbour, was opened in December, 1965, and the management contract with Mionot was for 10 years,

The Government thanked the Israsli firm for its "monumental task" in establishing and managing the hotel for seven years,

It added that it had been unable to accede to an offer from Mionot to pull out last January because the tourist corporation was not then in a position to take over.

UNITED NATIONS. - The U.S. joined China in opposition to a So-vist proposal for a world disarmament conference, according to an official document.

More than 30 other U.N. members, including Britain and France, gave qualified approval to the plan, according to a document published Wednesday by U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldhaim.

The Soviet Union proposed the conference last year in the General Assembly. The Assembly then adopted a resolution by acclamation that the idea would be given careful consideration. Only the U.S. and China rejected the proposal. The U.S. did leave the door open for future consideration, according to the document.

U.S. Secretary of State William Rogers was to have held a private dinner last night for Deputy Foreign Minister Chiao Kuan-huz of the People's Republic of China, diplomatic sources said. It would be the first such meeting between high-ranking American and Chinese officials outside the mainland since the Peking summit, and climaxed Mr. Rogers' most important day of bilateral consultations during the current U.N. General Assembly session.

Before seeing the Chinese official, Mr. Rogers had scheduled consultations with his counterparts from Egypt and India, two nations very critical of U.S. foreign policy.

Luggage pilfered in Israel

By GEORGE LEONOF

Jerusalem Post Reporter
TEWS in the Soviet Union must not only undergo humiliating customs inspection and virtual robbery on leaving for Israel. The piti-ful remnants of property they manage to ship out are also plundered in the Jewish homeland. Here again there is customs inspection in the ports and warehouses — but now this is done 'illegally,' in the ab-sence of the owners. All sorts of articles are taken, nothing is scorn-ed as too trivial — whether a crystal vase, a child's toy, a book or a

The above is an excerpt from a letter sent three months ago to a. number of Government Ministers, in cluding the Fremier, signed by 11 newly arrived families living at the Mevasseret Zion Absorption Centre outside Jerusalem. The letter describes the situation in warehouses at Kurdeneh and Zrifin as "scandalous," adding that "the thieves apparently worked unhurriedly." Effects listed as missing include kitchen appliances and it is charged that in some cases entire pieces of luggage never reach the owner.

The complaint also charges that careless handling results in some crates being "amashed to smithereens," and implies that this damage is not entirely accidental. In addiconsignments arrive damp, with irreparable damage to some of their contents, such as planos.

There is no clear answer yet to immigrants' charges that entire luggage units fall to arrive. Every attempt is made to have all luggage arriving in Vienna checked off, agency officials explain, but the paper work lags behind, and is done in different countries. A consign-ment may be checked in Vienza, the entire freight wagon may be shuttled over and sent on to Trieste, where it is unloaded.

The warehouse congestion is such that everywhere the overflow luggage is kept out in the open await-ing shipment, even though an at-tempt is made to plan the flow diverting it to Venice and even Naples, as well as Trieste. The situation is not satisfactory in Israel either, but is improving.

immigrant from the Soviet Union, to only a couple of weeks in large, but has aircady made his Tel Aviv concert debut. Warshavsky graduated from the Moscow Conservatory in 1959 and since 1961 has been appearing as soloist at recitals and with various orchestras. In the Bach Suite he exhibited an extremely personal approach, indulging in eccentric dynamics, pathetic gestures and in rhythmic fiexibility which completely distorted Bach's music. His phrasing was erratic in character and the whole performance lacked inner balance and form. Schubert's Arpeggione, however, showed him in a completely different light. He demonstrated a strong sense for portic expression. Techalcally too, this was a great improvement on the Bach, although some of the subtleties were lost and ntonation was not always entirely satisfactory.

The best achievement of the eve ning was doubtlessly Program, which the artist played with great jest and subduing temperament. The performance fully revealed the immense dynamic energy of the work, its clashing contrasts and its unabating forward surge. In this work the cellist was fully assisted by Alexander Volkow, whose share in this convincing performance was as weighty as that of the cellist. Volkow was much less impressive in the Arpeggione whose plane part sounded rather colourless was by Hans van Manen, Dutch choreographer who will be coming here next year to create ballets for the Bat-Dor company. It was a somewhat stylized study for eight dancers, inspired by Beethoven's "Grosse Fuge." The third was the umpteenth revival of John Cranko's popular "Pine-apple Poll" — a jolly but rather obvious bit of comedy with a nautical drift.

Rehearsal thrill

This programme also marked the debut of a group of the Royal Ballet, chosen for special works of smaller scale than the major classics. The dancers were excellent, of course, but there was much more thrill in watching a rehearsal of a ballet called "Stages" by the London Contemporary Dance Company. MADAM, YOUR BAG, PLEASE

By A. S. I. ACKER
I HAD begun to think I would never make it. Every time I got close to the age when I was due to be posted from the active reserve into civil defence, they moved up the age of transfer another couple of of transfer another couple of years. I seemed to be in pursuit of an expanding horizon and the faster I approached the faster it retreated.

It was not only I who was puzzled by this. For the past 10 years, every time I've turned up for duty, I have been greated, by those in charge, with cries that mingled both disbelief and dismay. "Good heavens! Are you still with us? Oh, well, never mind. This is surely your last year." is surely your last year."
This lack of enthusism was so marked as to force me to believe that my call up was a mistake. Yet I was never forgotten. Even when I went abroad for a whole year, the army got me for three weeks just before I left and another fust before I left and another three weeks immediately after I returned. Was is just that a computer had slipped a cog and begun to hiccup? Is there a high-ranking officer with my name (and his father having my father's name: Haim) still on the army lists? If so, sir, please come forward: I have been doing all your duty since been doing all your duty since

Of course, as soon as I appeared, it was obvious I wasn't the man the army was looking for. But once I was there, clearly not wanting to be gra-tuitously insulting, they didn't like to send me home again.

I think it would be fair to say, taking one thing with another, that I have had an undistinguished military career. In the same length of time it has taken three men to rise from the ranks to Chief of Staff, I have gone from private to corporal and back to pri-Vate.

It's not that I didn't try. I am not a conscientious objector. I have my list of people that I'm prepared to kill—though it's true that most of them are Jewish and none are Arab. Early in my army service, I even shot at Arab Freedom Fighters, (they were smuggling tobacco on camels) and while it is true that I missed both them and the camels, it was because of ineptitude and not ill-will. It was not by my mistake that I had not by my mistake that I had been drafted into the Palmah as a suiper: I had applied for

It might have been the dif-ficulties I had in learning Hebrew that prevented my be-coming a colonel or, at least, a sergeant. I went to heder like every other good Jewish mother's son in Manchester, for any or seven were lett at for six or seven years but at the end of that time, the only word I could recognize at sight was Adonai, and the only sen-tence I could read was, "Blessed art Thou, O Lord our God, King of the universe, who nition (tahmoshet) for that?" he asked, pointing at my rifle. I didn't know the word for "ammunition," but because I'd once had half an army first aid course, I did know the word for bandage — tahboshet. I thought he was asking me if I had a bandage for the rifle. Quite naturally, I was puzzled by this question, and he became impatient.

"Bullets," he said, speaking in pidgin Hebrew for my benefit. "Bullets. Go in here. Press trigger. Click. Bang, swoof, puif, booommm!"

"Oh," I said, and smiled at him in relief at having understood at last. 'No," I said in my best Hebrew. "No, not got that. I just got rifle."

"Prities ! (dahilak)" he snarled. "How you guarding my tent then?"

Well, I didn't know I was really supposed to be guard-ing his tent Had I thought about what I was doing there — but I hadn't — I would have said that, of the two, he looked far more capable of guarding it than I did.

Later, when we both discovered that the other knew English, we had another conversation, and this was both friendlier and more intelligent.

However, by then the damage had been done. The following year I was made Assistant Company Runner, and that was not really a promotion.

Now, after almost 25 years, my Hebrew is much better than it was. It hasn't improved to the extent that my English has deteriorated, but it is better than it used to be. It is only here and there I still have difficulties.

The last time I was on active reserve duty was not more than a couple of months ago.

I was serving at an army post on top of a big, bare hill in plain view of all of Northern Israel. One day a command car came along the track that led to nowhere but to us. I was fairly sure that they were Israel soldiers who were in it, because this was broad daycreateth the fruit of the vine." After I had been in this coun-After I had been in this country for about six months the only world I could distinguish when Hebrew was poured over me, was bevakaska, and it was at least another six months before I could be sure to pronounce it like that and not beshakava.

Dress habits

It was my lack of Hebrew that made me feel uncomfortable one morning not long after missing the camels. I was singled out from an entire company of soldiers (or possibly it was a battalion) and my modesty offended by being praised in front of all the other soldiers. That is, I thought I was being praised. This happened at a time when the army was changing its habits of dress and appearance from oid-style-partisan to spitand-polish. I thought I was being commended for the way I was dressed. I learnt later that I had been exhibited as everything a soldier shouldn't look like. From head to toe, (cap inside out, shoes unshined) and everything in between I, was it seemed, the perfect example of what the new Israell soldier should not be. that made me feel uncomfort-

Ten years later — I am picking these incidents practically at random — I was sent to serve in the unit of which Bill Brown was one of the of-Bill Brown was one of the of-ficers. He was one of the sol-diers who had pinched a tank from the British just before they left the country and who had come over to the Jewish side with it. He had been a private then, but by the time we met he was second in com-mand of an armoured unit. He shot cut of his tent one mornshot out of his tent one morning while I was mooning round and round outside in the sand, light, we were 10 miles deep in veteran Jewish settlements, and moreover the occupants were dressed in the uniforms of Mexican bandits. I became certain of the fact that they were Israel soldiers when they threw off our daily bread rather than the soldiers when they tion, (eleven loaves for three men) and a copy of "Ma'ariv," into the puddle by the water-

I was supposed to be guarding the gate of this encampment — not the encampment itself, just the gate, and this had been made quite plain to me. Perhaps there was a danger of the gate being stolen, because although there was a lock and chain on it (two locks, in fact) the keys had been lost and it had to be held in place with a brick.

Since there were Israelis who were coming up, and I was only torporous and not actualonly torporous and not actually asleep on duty, the only danger I could possibly be in was in having some one discover that the weapon I was carrying hadn't been cleaned since the first generation of grounds had brought it there since the first generation of guards had brought it there, presumably not long after the War of Independence. But I was still trying to be a good soldier, and before the sergeant got out I ambled over to ask for the password.

"Goat's dung and yellow cheese," he said, or something like it: our army is very inventive.

"That was last week's,"

"No. no. it hasn't changed." He was quite positive.
I looked at my hand. I've always had trouble in remembering random phrases, even in English, so this time I'd written the password on my hand. (If I had been captured by gypsies and they had read my palm, the security for an entire area would have been compromised.) "Here, look at this," I said to the sergeant, offering him my hand.

"He shook it. "Shalom," he

"No, just look here. That's "Really? I've never heard of it." He turned to his driver. "What do you think?" But army drivers aren't required to do more than look after their army drivers are their army drivers are their army drivers are their army drivers are their arms are driver their arms are drivers are drivers their arms are drivers. their cars and drive them. They don't have to open gates, for instance, or help unload; they don't have to think un-less they want to. This one didn't want to.

There was a short, uncertain pause. By rights, I should have shot the sergeant — not dead, of course, just in the left leg, say — or, at the very least, I should have put a bullet through the command car.

Perhaps it was not only language difficulties that acounts for my lack of promotion; per-haps if I had snot him instead of letting him through I would not have been kicked upstairs into the Civil Force - I got the posting order last week.

Its upset me. Now I haven't got more than another 10 or 15 years left before I'll have to give up soldiering entirely. And in that time, sitting on a stool just outside the supermarket, I've no hope at all of even getting back to the rank of

Working honeymoon

BROOKLYN PARK, Minnesota (AP). — Peggy Lauzon and Dick Cotter are getting married tomorrow and as newlyweds soon will move into their new 10-bedroom house — with 18 of their children.

Cotter, a production engineer for Honeywell, Inc., has 10 chil-dren, but only one daughter is married. Mrs. Lauzon, a nurse, has nine children. Cotter said he probably wouldn't have had the courage to propose to Mrs. Lauzon M it hadn't been he said with a grin. Both Cotter and Mrs. Lauzon take the doubling of their already

"You get to a point where, whether you've got nine kids or 19, it's just the difference between the second and third powers of bedlam," Cotter said.

'I'm sure we'll have the same problems you normally have with kids — just more of them," Mrs. Lauzon added.

The two-day conference of 80 scientists represents the first international meeting of researchers studying BCG.

By coincidence, it comes about two weeks after an Oak Ridge, Tennessee, scientist reported using the substance against animal cancers. The report stirred widespread but quickly quashed hopes that a major breakthrough had already been achieved toward curing human cancers.

Long used as an anti-tuberculosis vaccine, BCG more recently came under investigation as a possible means of treating cancer by stimu-lating the body's natural immunological defences against disease.

Man arms self for space attack

BREMEN (UPI). — A 41-year-old mechanic was so afraid of invaders from outer space he assembled a private arsenal of rifles, pistols and grenades and held target practice in his apartment at nights, police said on Wednesday.

"Men from outer space are standing outside. They want to get all of us," the man said when police came for him late Tuesday night, a police spokesman said.

The spokesman said police confiscated 30 loaded pistols, nine rifies, several grenades and large quantities of ammunition in the man's apart-"We believe he is mentally disturbed," the spokesman said.

The mechanic did not resist when police took him to a nearby "nerve clinic," the spokesman said.

Behind the trucking crisis

teo teeeks ago Israel's trucking dustry took the country by sur-rise with a brief "warning" strike - which started on the eve of om Kippur. The struce ostensibly as to protest against the Transort Ministry's implementation of tti-air pollution regulations for diei engines. Its deeper underlying usons and the troubled state of e haulage industry are examined this article by Ernie Meyer.

THE overall picture of Israel's trucking has been one of the g fleets expanding and the small erators running the danger of ing squeezed out. As one knowdgeable economist put it: "The g boys have their firm commitents and tacit arrangements, hich are not publicized. I doubt hether anybody has a clear idea their earnings, and the Govern-ent keeps its eyes shut."

The man on the street probably resn't realize how much the work the truckers touches his life. In rael trucks carry about 95 per nt of all freight. This compares th close to 65 per cent in Eng-nd and West Germany, and 50 per nt in the U.S. The reason for the eponderance of road transport here the small size of the rail network id the absence of inland waterlys. The country is too small for r-freighting to be significant. In 1971 Israeli trucks haused a tal of 65m. tons for a turnover almost IL800m. The overriding portance of the trucking industry agriculture, industry, construcon, marketing, defence and export rdly needs elaboration. There are ore than 19,000 trucks in the untry, 8,500 of them of 10-ton right and over. The vast majority trucks are powered by diesel

> Mr. Gover mentions the need to improve the load factor. He says that most trucks travel loaded only 50-60 per cent of the time, the rest being wasted on empty return trips. He sees lack of organization as a paramount problem of the industry. This and the elimination of the brokerage system, he says. Basically he feels that the industry should not be left unprotected against the forces of supply and demand of the economy, which re-sult in great fluctuations in the demand for trucking services - especially for smaller firms. Another result of fluctuation is cut-throat competition, again, especially af-fecting the smaller operators. PUBLIC SERVICE

The truckers think that only the Government can help improve their situation. They want the status of a "public service." They want the establishment of a legally constitut-ed statutory Haulage and Trucking Board, along the lines of the Citrus Board, the Poultry Board, etc. (Our economist points out that all these boards represent "producing" in dustries and that a Haulage Board would be the first to represent a "service" industry.) The truckers would like to have the special status enjoyed by the Zim Shipping Egged, or the Israel Railways, Mr. Gover says. In addition to the present Government-controlled maalmum prices, they also want minimum prices to protect them. The truckers want the board to be headed by the Transport Minister. Board membership would be divided, with 50 per cent to truckers, 30 per cent to the Government and per cent to the industries emplying trucking services. The truckers think, perhaps naively, that such a board could safeguard them against all market fluctuations; they know they could use the board to reduce competition by the simple expedient of controlling the number of new truckers entering the business. In the words of our economist, "the truckers seem to be aspiring to a closed shop." Perhaps some of the older truckers have in mind the example of the taxi business, where Government control has resulted in taxi permits fetching up to IL100,000 on the resale market. Taximen regard the cash value of their permits as a form of life insurance." There is probably some

Pollution and the diesel

The diesel and petrol engines are similar in construction and function. The petrol engine compresses a mixture of fuel and air to a relatively low pressure and ignites the mix by means of an electric spark (spark plug). Because the mix ratio of air to fuel is fixed and limited there is always an insufficiency of air to permit complete combustion of the fuel. This results in heavy extraust emissions of the unburned components of the fuel.

The diesel engine compresses air only and ignition is caused when a regulated fuel spray comes into contact with the extremely hot compressed air, eliminating the need for spark plugs. Because a diesel engine compresses air only, it is possible to supply a virtually unlimited amount of air which results in a more complete combustion of fuel and a dilution of exhaust gases.

Dangerous carbon monoxide emissions of the diesel engine are only five per cent of those of a petrol engine Hydrocarbons constitute only ten per cent. Thus the total poisonous emissions of a diesel engine are only 15 per cent those of a petrol motor. The black smoke sometimes emitted by diesel trucks is highly noticeable but much less dangerous than the invisible emissions of private Cars.

all new legislation concerning their industry. Here they are particularly concerned with a reduction of import duties on new vehicles, the raising of load limitations and supervision of repair costs.

As a result of the recent strike Transport Minister Shimon Peres and his deputy, Gad Ya'acobi, met the truckers in a five-hour session in Tel Aviv last week. Mr. Peres rejected the idea of a staboard, telling the truckers that "it might further hamstring the industry and burden it with additional bureaucracy." He also expressed concern that a board would dominated by the big operators to the detriment of the smaller ones. Mr. Peres instead announced the establishment of a trucking industry advisory board and the assignment of special Ministry staff to work with the truckers until the new board can be set up. (A similar board existed in the 1960s but did not last long.)

Equally important perhaps, Mr. Peres promised the truckers that his Ministry would try to get the pre-sent II.16m. credit allocation for the purchase and maintenance of vehicles increased to IL75m.

A Histadrut representative at the meeting supported the truckers' demand for a statutory board.

In an interview with The Post Transport Ministry Director-General Dan Hiram stressed that the prob-lem of import duties on new vehicles is well on the way to a partial solution. He pointed out that according to a little publicized decision in June import duties on trucks are to be gradually reduced from the present 90 per cent to 65 per cent in 1976. This follows a recommendation of the Bartal committee, he said. He questioned the truckers' right to the lower rates of the buses and taxis, pointing to the fact that even the present high rates had failed to restrain the influx of newcomers into the industry and the purchase of new equipment. In other words, earnings seemed to be satisfactory. OVERLOAD FACTOR

Mr. Hiram also said that the Government today tacitly permits a 15-25 per cent overload factor. "But the Government is worried that if the manufacturer licences his truck for ten ton, for example, the truckers will load it with 18 ton. This would endanger traffic, damage the roads and increase air pollution,"

The truckers claim that with the implementation of the new anti-pol-lution regulations the hauling power of a ten-ton truck which today carries about 12 ton would be reduced to a mere six to seven ton.

"We are as much in rayout Mr. Amit. clean air as the next man," Mr. Amit.

BONN CRACKS DOWN

THE decision of the West German government to outlaw radical Arab organizations and to expel a large number of Palestinians and other Arabs connected with terrorist activities in Europe is a timely and necessary one.

Allowing the radical Arabs to continue their various activities unchecked would have made a mockery of Bonn's solemn pledge to uproot terror.

For some months the German government had been very careful to avoid taking action which could be interpreted as offensive by Arab capitals. But the Munich massacre and Cairo's callous behaviour as attempts were made to rescue the Israeli athletes apparently convinced Chancellor Brandt and his associates that the time has come to crack Talks on large-scale economic aid to Egypt were suspended. Hundreds of Arabs were refused entry to Germany and many others were expelled.

The German move is bound to have psychological repercussions in those West European countries still hesitating over adoption of measures to deal with the thousands of radical Arabs in their midst. A number of them, including Holland, have been carrying out a quiet policy of selective arrests and expul-

It has become clear that the Palestinian terrorists and their local supporters in various countries endanger not only Israel personnel and offices, but also, and perhaps even in greater measure, the peace and public safety of Western European countries.

a time when the borders in Western Europe have almost disappeared and security control made far more difficult, resolute measures are necessary to preserve the area from the wave of terror that threatens to engulf it.

Tragically, it took a calamity on the scale of Munich to shock governments into a realization of the dangers they face. It be-came clear to some of them that the sooner they act the easier it will be to deal with the problem of international terrorism Germany has its hands full at the moment with scores of radi-cal groups, on both left and right, hoping that anarchy will draw attention to their existence. Israelis are but one target, but one which Germany cannot permit to be assaulted.

Perhaps more stringent measures will be required in the fu-ture. The battle will take a long time. But, at least in Germany, it has begun in earnest.

SADAT FINDS HE CAN'T DO WITHOUT MOSCOW

O'NE of America's top experts on the Soviet Union, the noted diplomat George Kennan, once said that the only people who can get along with the Russians are those who have proved they can get along without them.

Indeed, in ousting the Soviets from Egypt last July, President Anwar Sadat appeared to have been making an attempt to con-form with this principle, which Mr. Kennan described as "a working rule for dealing with the Russians." But Sadat has evi-dently failed in this attempt, just as he has in most of his ven-

Hardly five weeks after Sadat got rid of the Soviets, he was already trying to mend relations with Moscow, indicating he was unable to get along without them. Towards the end of August he dispatched a message to Soviet Communist Party chief Leonid Brezhnev despite his assurance that he would not be the one to make the first move to improve

Russia was obviously reluctant to respond to Sadat's message and no reply was forthcoming for about three weeks. Then Syria's President Hafez Assad, Sadat's partner in the tripartite federation which also includes Libya, flew secretly to Moscow last week on a mediation mission which was followed by an un-expected visit to Cairo. Shortly afterwards the Soviet and Egyptian ambassadors returned to their respective posts in Cairo and Moscow after a two-month absence, and it was announced that Egyptian Premier Aziz Sidky would visit Moscow next weekend, to settle Soviet-Egyptian differences and prepare for a summit conference.

Cairo explained its actions by saying it was merely normalizing relations with the "friendly" Soviet Union. But the real reasons, all stemming from Sadat's miscalculations, were believed to nations to rush to Egypt's aid and fill the void left by the Russians the West steered clear Russians—the West steered clear of Cairo partly because Sadat made it clear that he wanted help to combat Israel, not a popular cause in the West. Furthermore, Western nations were not willing to get involved in Egypt's complicated political situation, following Cairo's open involvement with the terrorist movement during the Munich affair.

Sadat's realization that the removal of the Russians from Egypt did not mean their removal from the Middle East. On the contrary, the Russians hurried to strengthen their links with Iraq and Syria, and Sadat was left as odd man out. Only the Libyans and the terrorists remained as staunch allies.

The fading of popular sup-port for Sadat. The Arab man in the street, at first enthusiastic over the Russian ouster, seemed to be at a loss when the Egyptian President failed to provide an alternative.

In fact, Sadat soon indicated he was pursuing the same old path, and he eventually sought a reconciliation with the Rus-

As a result of his decision to oust them last July, Sadat can now be sure that the Russians will not return to Egypt on the same massive scale. What might eventually emerge is a resumption of normal relations, with Moscow again piedging aid to Cairo, and Egypt providing Mos-cow with naval and air facilities on its territory, although on a

Such an arrangement would not involve Moscow too much with Sadat's military confronta-tion with Israel, and, as a result. with the U.S. But It might have an impact on Mediterranean atrotegy, since the Soviets are likely to renew their reconnaissance operation over NATO activities from Egyptian territory as well as Syria. Concerning Egypt itself, the Russians seem to be buying time until Sadat is overthrown. They never really trusted him, even though they signed a 15-year treaty with him.

What seems to be clear is that despite the forthcoming reconciliation Sadat is unlikely to get along with the Russians. For he has failed to prove he can get along without them.

Paglin and Kahane:

The Galut mentality returns

IT has been a weird start to the 25th anniversary of the State of Israel. Just as we have begun to celebrate the first quartercentury of the renewal of Jewish national sovereignty, the ghosts of the pre-independence battles have suddenly begun to cast their sinister shadows.

It was the Lubavitcher Rebbe (in an entirely different context) who referred to the difficulty of eradicating the Galut mentality from Eretz Israel. For too many years the old animosities prevailing in the pre-State period between the Hagana, the LZL and the LHY. had poisoned the atmosphere.

Since the Six Day War at least, the old ghosts seemed to have been laid and the an-cient hatreds alleviated. After all, people usually only resort to violence and clandestine activities on behalf of an idea when they are denied legitimate political expression. The old distinctions appeared to be rubbed out, especially for young voters, for whom there has always been a Jewish State. The Haganah, the Palmah, the IZL. and Yair represent episodes in history, or in some cases names of streets (like Katznelson and Jabotinsky) but not a relevant force justifying a viable political movement.

The recent sequence of events and reports regarding gun smuggling and surreptitious meetings came as a distinct surprise carrying with it a sense of anachronism.

Most people were undoubtedly shocked and dismayed at the idea of a Jewish underground, and Police Minister Shlomo Hillel expressed widespread sentiment when declaring: do think we should send a herald throughout the country to announce that the State is here, that independence has arrived, for all those who are not aware of this fact as yet."

Amihai Paglin, known generally as "Gidi" from his nickname in LZ.L. days, is a widely liked, perhaps misguided patriot, At 50 he is today a successful metal factory owner. (It was in his works that the oven that cremated Eichmann's remains was manufactured.) But it would appear from the interviews given by Paglin to the press after his arrest that his life since those exciting days in the LZL. has been one long anti-climax.

Backed Tamir

His friends say that his capacity for get-ting things done is not equalled by his po-litical acumen. Anyone who attended the rather hysterical sessions at the 8th Herut conference in the Kfar Maccabia hotel about eight years ago, when Shmuel Tamir was outmanocuvred by Menahem Begin and the late Arye Ben-Ellezer in his bid to take over the party, will not forget the dramatic appearance "Gidi." Indeed he was the only former top-ranking LZL commander to back Tamir, and later follow him into the political wilderness of the Free Centre Party

Thus the intensive legal efforts by Tamir on Palgin's behalf should not be only interpreted - as some cynics would have it - as a desperate bid by the lawyer-politician to utilize this opportunity to create yet once again the kind of political trial that made his name in the past. After all, election day is only a year away and the Free Centre Party's prospects do not seem entirely bright.

Old political animosities from the era of the Jewish underground are once again coming to the fore, despite the existence of the State. which is supposed to take care of security matters, writes MARK SEGAL.

The reaction of the old commander of "GldL' Menahem Begin, has been interesting. The Gahai leader has admitted to having contacted the Prime Minister in a bid to avoid having put behind bars, but he never condoned the alleged arms smuggling attempt. Most significantly, Herut Executive Chairman Ezer Weizman has roundly condemned irresponsible individual actions in the antiterrorist campaign. Both Herut leaders appreciate that they must avoid at all costs any form of identification with this incident. They know that even their most right-wing supporters disown such measures.

Backlash

There are those who claim that the ground was laid for the emergence of the J.D.L., "Dov" and other radical nationalist groups as a backlash to the near-control of street demonstrations by the left-wing especially during the Goldmann affair early in 1970. It is said that certain wealthy individuals began to give money to the rightists after foreign TV cameras continuously gave the impression that leftist groups.

But one can hardly consider the Paglin case and the arms smuggling attempt with-out taking into account the post-Munich atmosphere. We were all carrying with us part of the pall of grief and gloom that settled across the land at the time. Then came the recriminations about the inadequacies of Israel's own security precautions for the Olym-

Here again was a first-class example of the failure of the Government to disseminate information to the public, a failure to appreciate the psychological climate which brought some people even to condone Rabbi Kahane's brand of tactics, and sympathize with Paglin's case.

Whatever happens with Paglin, one thing is already clear that Meir Kahane is finished with many of his ertswhile supporters in the radical wing of the nationalist camp. While the less radical have been deterred by his antics as revealed to "Playboy," I have been informed that many in the ultra-activist wing now dismiss him as exhibitionist.

Kahane received many appeals after the Munich massacre urging him to give a lead. But he is now accused of having chosen the easy way out by seeking to organize his supposed anti-terror campaign from Israel. According to some sources he approached the security people, who turned him down cold, regarding him as the opposite of reliable. Those who should know say he operated on two assumptions: if his scheme should work - fine. But if not, then he could use it against the Government.

Kahane then began to look for the pro-say he turned to Paglin.

It is said that he even made a bid to contact Defence Minister Moshe Dayan, who tried and failed to make a deal.

Kahane then decided to break the story of Hershkowitz's arrest in the hope that he and he even estranged those elements who might have been his natural alties in the nationalist dicies.

As one of them put it: "What kind of underground calls a press conference to dramatize its plight?" Apparently Kahane then began to get scared, feeling he was pushed into a corner, and out of pure bravado announced the formation of a party that will contest the 1978 elections. So doing he took up cudgess with Tamir's group and Gahal — thereby once again estranging those who might have help-ed him win the respectability he needs if he es to survive the J.D.L. chief, when asked whether his new replied: "I do not wish to be the slave of a slave.
